

PINE-RICHLAND RAMPAGE

Farewell 2021: Final Moments Before Break

Freshmen Tessa Rodgers, Lauren Marsilio, Ally Smith, Kate Iams, and Rachel Cottrell hanging out in the morning.

Freshman Kate Iams enjoying some chips in the cafeteria.

Freshman Lauren Marsilio working.

All photos by Freshman Kendall Kirkland.

Successful Study Habits Midterm Advice from a Senior

CAMERON PERKINS DESIGN EDITOR

The return to school after winter break can seem stressful while preparing for midterms. However, with the right preparation and dedication good results on midterm exams can definitely be achieved.

1. Find an ideal study space. Everyone has a different method of studying that works best for them. Some might find that reviewing in a small group is most effective, while others may prefer complete silence. Whichever location is best for you, make sure you can devote a solid amount of time for your preparation. Setting up a time and place to study ahead of time will help alleviate stress.

2. Organize past tests and notes. The best method for reviewing what you've already learned is utilizing the materials you completed in the past. Revisiting test questions you may have found difficult earlier in the school year or looking over notes for a large unit will refresh your memory. Ask yourself the questions from old exams and if you struggle with the answers, you will know which specific areas you need to review.

3. Revisit information by making a new study guide or flashcards. Memorizing large portions of papers or a textbook can seem daunting at first. To make the review process more concise, try handwriting a study guide or typing flashcards on Quizlet. This way, you are not only seeing the information but actively recollecting it with the end goal of studying again.

4. Use more than one method of studying. Instead of purely reading over notes or using flashcards, try to switch up the ways you are reviewing. For example, switching from reading the textbook to writing out a study guide and then studying with a group will make each method more interesting. If you keep yourself engaged while studying, it will seem less of a large task.

The RAMPAGE staff working on their deadlines. Photo by freshman Kendall Kirkland.

5. Don't be afraid to ask for help. Teachers want to see their students understand what they have learned so that they have the opportunity to be the most successful. Don't be afraid to reach out to your teachers if you need extra review. They are here to help.

Using these study tips will hopefully help you feel more confident for the upcoming midterm week. The RAMPAGE staff wishes you the best of luck on all of your exams.

Pine Richland

Complete the crossword puzzle below about things all over PRSD.

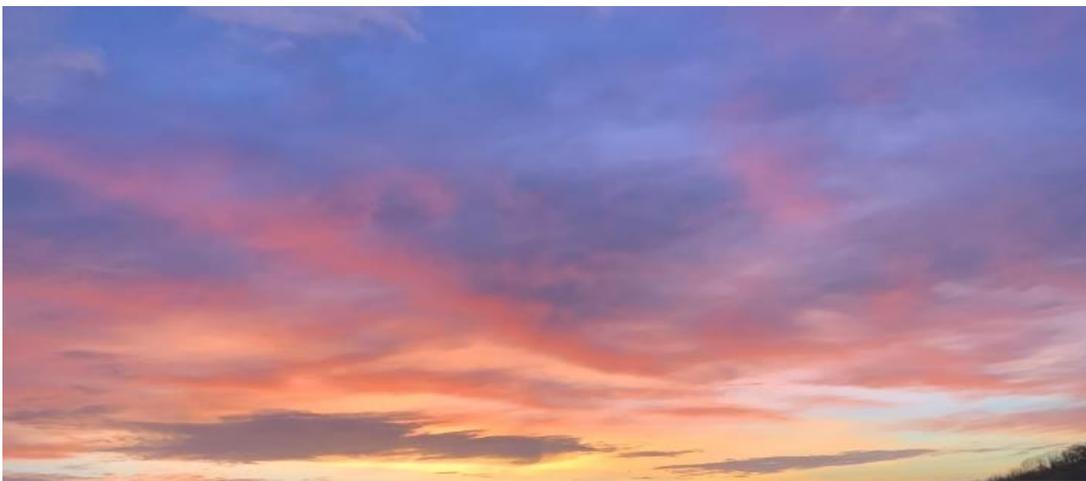

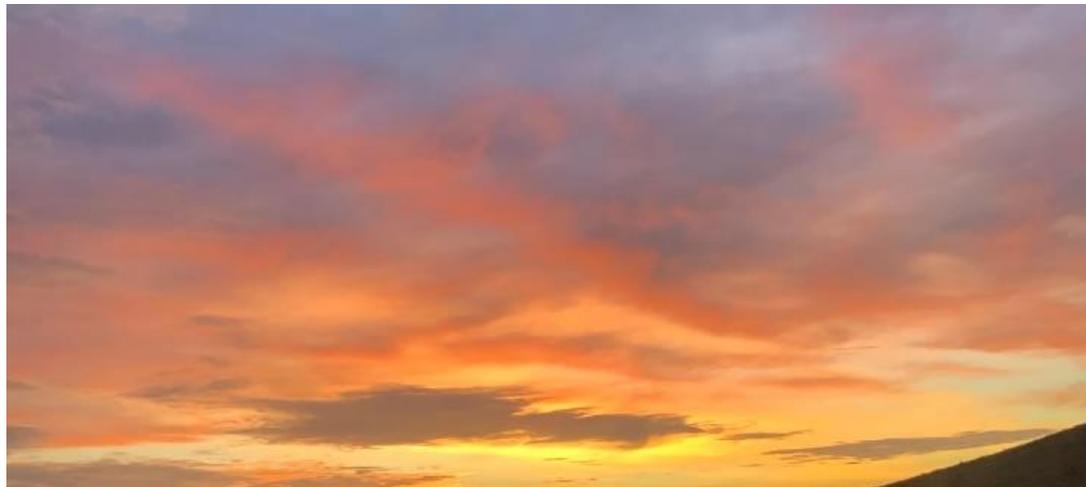

Down

1. Championship for sports teams in our area
2. Friday nights in the fall
3. school newspaper
6. Upper Elementary
8. School mascot

Across

4. A place with no constant temperature
5. The math class every single struggled person has struggled in
7. practice Field
9. Where all the winning happens
10. 3peat wpial champs

PR Sunrises

Top photo by senior Lizzi Montanti, bottom photos by sophomore Mikayla Saversky.

RAMPAGE STAFF

Design Editors
Lizzi Montanti
Cameron Perkins

Staff Writers:
Agnes Allvin
Ava Barson
Ashley Chapman
Chinedu Clarke
Katie Coyne
Emma Eckert
Nicolai Ezolt
Blake Fuchs
Aiden Helligenstein
Calle Henne
Caleb Hirsch
Lina Jewart
Kendall Kirkland
Lauren Marsilio
Quinn Martin
June McCune
Ava Means
Abby Moreland
Asma Muddassar
Evan Pavlick
Ella Perestock
Lucy Rockacy
Brett Saulnier
Mikayla Saversky

Teacher:
Mrs. Harshman

The RAMPAGE is a student-created publication of Pine-Richland High School, 700 Warrendale Road, Gibsonia, PA 15044.

The newsroom is 221.

The Rampage is available online each Thursday.

THANKS FOR READING,
GOOD LUCK ON MIDTERMS,
AND HAPPY NEW YEAR, PR!